Using eRA Commons to Improve Data on the Biomedical Research Workforce

Posted on August 2, 2013

In April I blogged about the various ways NIH is taking on the challenge of improving data on the biomedical research workforce, particularly those who receive training support from NIH. In 2009 we began requiring eRA Commons accounts for all postdocs listed in the grantees' annual progress report and over the next year we'll be extending this requirement to capture data on NIH-supported graduate students and undergraduate students as well.
